

College Preparation Web Sites

1. <http://www.collegeboard.com>. The College Board web site provides information on the SAT and other college preparation information.
2. <http://www.act.org/>. The ACT web site provides information on the ACT and other college preparation information.
3. <http://www.collegeview.com>. This site includes information on criteria-based searches, virtual campus tours, financial aid answers and resources, school applications, career information, and expert answers, just to name a few.
4. <http://www.ed.gov/thinkcollege/early>. The Think College web site is designed to provide information on educational opportunities beyond high school for learners of all ages.
5. <http://www.collegeispossible.org/>. This site is a resource guide for parents, students, and education professionals. This site will guide you to the books, web sites, and other resources that admissions and financial aid professionals consider most helpful.
6. <http://www.mapping-your-future.org>. This site provides information about higher education and career opportunities.
7. <http://www.collegelink.com>. This site provides information on how to prepare for college and information on various colleges and universities.